Spring luncheon to feature harp

When retirees meet to celebrate the end of the academic year on May 10, they will be treated to not only a delicious luncheon buffet but also to beautiful harp music by Erzsébet Gaál Rinne. Retirees may arrive after 11 a.m. to select a seat. The buffet will start at 11:30 a.m. Meadowood will provide bus service from the Center for Exploration of Energy and Matter (formerly the cyclotron) parking area.

Erzsébet Gaál Rinne

is a Hungarian-American harpist. She is an honors graduate of the Ferenc Liszt Academy of Music in Budapest and holds a doctor of music degree from the Jacobs School of Music. A faculty member at IUPUI and University of Evansville, she is a Kodály pedagogue and researcher in physical wellness for musicians. For more information, see https://harpahungarica.com.

Space limitations require that only the first 82 reservations can be accommodated. Because the deadline for reservations is May 1 and newsletter delivery by then cannot be guaranteed, you may email Martha Smiley, martha-smiley@att.net, to inquire about availability. The cost is $25 for members, $28 for nonmembers.

Mattie White celebrates women athletes

Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 prohibited sex-based discrimination in federally funded education programs. The 37-word statute, written by Indiana Sen. Birch Bayh, made no mention of athletics; Title IX was an antidiscrimination amendment to the Civil Rights Act. Nevertheless, it has become synonymous with sports equity. At the IURA's April 11 meeting, Mattie White, deputy director for athletics and the department's senior woman administrator, took retirees on a whirlwind tour of the impact of Title IX on women's athletics at IU.

Mattie paid tribute to the pioneers. Among them:

- Anita Aldrich, chair of the department of physical education for women, in 1971 the first woman to serve on the IU athletics committee, becoming its chair in 1978;
- Kay Burrus, IU's first head coach for field hockey;
- Bea Gorton, IU's first women's basketball coach, who led her team to the Final Four in the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women in 1973;
- Leanne Grotke, the Big Ten's first fulltime associate athletic director for women's athletics;
- Dean Summers, who launched women's tennis and synchronized swimming programs in 1971:
- Ann Lawyer, IU's first volleyball coach; and
- Buzz Kurpius, who established one of the very first academic counseling departments, which served as a model for many others, and became the nation's first female assistant football coach.

Through the years, women athletes have competed at the highest level. Among them:

- Tina McCall, the first African-American woman to receive an athletics scholarship, earned All-American honors in 1981;
- Tina Parrott, a three-time All American, won the 1985 NCAA 800-meter race;

- Michelle Dekkers was NCAA cross country champion in 1988; and
- Kimiko Soldati was an Olympian in women's swimming and diving in 2004.

Women athletes continue to achieve renown. Lilly King won gold medals at the 2016 Olympics. In 2021 Kristen Hayden became the first Black woman diver to win a U.S. National championship. This year's basketball team drew a record number of fans.

Grace Berger was Indiana Fever's firstround pick in the 2023 WNBA draft, and Mackenzie Holmes was the first women's basketball player to be named a first-team All American. Grace and Mackenzie were named to the Academic All Big Ten team, along with Kiandra Brown and Chloe Moore-McNeil. Teri Moren was named National Coach of the Year.

Mattie pointed out that IU women athletes excel in the classroom too. Through the last academic year, their mean cumulative GPA was above 3.4, with 76 women earning a 4.0.

In 2021 the Women's Excellence Initiative was launched, Mattie said, to elevate the 13 women's varsity sports. Capital projects for softball, rowing, and field hockey are underway.

Retirees peppered Mattie with questions. Bonnie Brownlee asked how women are faring under NIL, the NCAA program that allows collegiate athletes to be compensated for their name, image, and likeness. Mattie said that, although men currently are ahead in earnings, women are benefiting too (e.g., Sydney Parrish endorsing the Owen County Bank). Athletics, she believes, changes the trajectory of women's lives.

Several questions concerned women's basketball. It's possible, Mattie said, that ticketing policies for women's basketball will change. As for recruits and transfers, she acknowledged that there will be movement. "Teri Moren will continue to recruit women of character and enthusiasm," she said.

In introducing Mattie, Bruce Jaffee said that, since her arrival at IU in 2005, she has taken on more responsibilities, including co-chairing IU's United Way campaign. She participated in women's athletics in high school in Cambridge, Ohio, and has been named to its Distinguished Alumni Hall of Fame. She is pursuing a Ph.D. in IU's School of Public Health.

Retirees were welcomed by hospitality chair Martha Smiley, Eileen Schellhammer, and Linda Harl.

After the meeting Mattie White, center, talks with Bonnie Brownlee, Bruce Jaffee, Jim Grandorf, and JoAnne Bowen.

Remembering our friends

Twice a year since 2008, in April and August, Newswatch memorializes members who have died since the last listing. A complete list of obituaries is on the IURA website. Please notify the editor (jschroed@indiana.edu, 812-332-5057) of any omissions.

Annual meeting approves bylaws amendment, elects board members

The 2023 annual meeting was held April 11, IURA President Joyce Krothe presiding. An amendment to the bylaws makes membership more inclusive, extending it to former faculty and staff without official Indiana retiree status. Bylaws are posted on the website.

Treasurer Anita Douglas reported that the IURA is financially strong. On Aug. 31, 2022, the balance was $16,702.49. At the end of March, with several expenses yet to be paid, the balance was $20,976.98.

Three people were elected to three-year terms on the IURA board of directors. Current vice president Perry Maull was re-elected to a second term. Beckie Owens and John Schilb will be joining the board.

Joyce thanked retiring board members Joe Miller and Martha Smiley.

Beckie Owens, John Schilb, and Perry Maull have been elected to three-year terms on the IURA board.

Website includes research opportunities

With board approval, IURA Webmaster Allan Edmonds has created an online Bulletin Board that posts opportunities for retirees to participate in university research projects focused on seniors. A link is on the IURA homepage. The direct link is https://iura.indiana.edu/bulletinboard.html.
